

Stopping satellite radio from broadcasting local traffic and weather is purely bending to the wishes of the NAB. There's no good reason why a premium service should be so arbitrarily regulated. By stopping satellite traffic and weather, it stifles competition, and therefore hurts the consumer. If broadcast radio offered a better service to the consumers rather than engage in this clearly monopolistic and anit-competitive behavior, this would not be an issue.